

About Spinlaw

SPINLAW (Student Public Interest Network Legal Action Workshop) is an annual conference organized by students from University of Toronto Faculty of Law and Osgoode Hall Law School of York University, which aims to raise awareness and generate discussion about public interest issues. The conference creates a space for students, local activists and community members to share their experiences and perspectives on current social justice issues.

This year's conference is titled Evaluating Equality: 25 Years of Charter Jurisprudence. Mary Eberts, a leading advocate in Charter jurisprudence will be our keynote speaker.

Speakers' panels will address law and development; the rights of Aboriginal children; refugee rights; disability rights; health law; and the future of equality rights.

Free admission. Breakfast, lunch and refreshments provided during conference with receptions on Friday and Saturday evenings.

The conference will be held at:

Flavelle House

Faculty of Law, University of Toronto

78 Queen's Park
